Search Lone Planet Search Lonely Planet Search Lonely Planet Direction Tayakadán, Tayakadán ahsaniye Yolu No.1, 34283 Amavutk-y/astanbul, Turkey Phone +90 212 444 14 42 A shiny new center for Turkish Airlines, flying to more than 300 destinations worldwide, including nine U.S. cities—Istanbul Airport has officially replaced Atat-k International Airport as the region's main international gateway and has the capacity to receive 90 million passengers in transit per year. While the airport's luminous, ventilated and ultra-modern main terminal is about to end, all that remains are a few finishing touches, this is only the first of several phases scheduled for development in the next decade. By 2028, Istanbul Airport will have the capacity to accommodate about 200 million passengers a year through four terminals and six runways, making it the busiest airport in the world. The official IATA code of Istanbul Airport is IST, a legacy of Ataturk International Airport. (Not to be confused with IST, the airport is managed by a Turkish company called iGA, which you will see in the airport logo and signage in the terminal.) Istanbul Airport is located in a rural district of Istanbul province, about 20 miles north of the city centre. While there are plans to connect the airport to the city with a metro line (scheduled to open in 2020), currently only some bus services, taxis and other private transfers, such as those that can organize your hotel, are available. The official airport website includes a flight tracking feature on its homepage. Additional resources include an interactive map of Istanbul Airport, a 360-degree exploration feature and detailed transportation information, including airport parking and driving directions. The Turkish Airlines website also has a useful guide to Istanbul Airport. The main customer service phone number at Istanbul Airport is 444 1 442, which you can call directly using cellular services or through Wi-Fi-enabled platforms like FaceTime andWhatsApp. The airport can also be reached via Twitter and email. Courtesy of Istanbul Airport Although Istanbul Airport currently has only one main terminal for all arrivals, departures and transfers (including separate tickets and security for international and domestic flights) at more than 15 million square feet, it is also one of the largest in the world Buildings. It is extensive and lacks mobile walkways or other transit infrastructure (e.g. shuttle buses or trams between esplanades) to speed up traffic through the length of the main building, which means it is essential to allow ample time to transfer between doors in different lobbies or to get to your door from major shopping and dining malls, also the location of all airline lounges. Under the iGA Pass Premium Experiences umbrella, which can be purchased online or through the airport app, the airport management company sells passes for one-time services, including access to the iGA lounge and iGA Buggy service, which costs 5 euros per adult (children and babies travel for free), is one of the only motorized ways to move around the terminal today. Of course, special services are always available to passengers who need additional assistance; Contact your airline before your travel dates to make arrangements, if necessary. Expert travelers will be on the lookout for a stopover or some extra time on the ground at Istanbul's new airport, which has numerous opportunities for shopping and dining, including the world's largest duty-free area, local specialty shops and extensive options for nosh in delicious local cuisine, whether in casual restaurants, seated restaurants or the new spacious new lounges for Turkish Airlines. The airport also has a 24-hour airport hotel, Yotel Istanbul, which has pre- and after-security tickets and can be booked hourly (with a minimum of four hours) or overnight. While the airport has a free public Wi-Fi network, it is configured in a way that requires a code sent via SMS to activate. This essentially makes the network inaccessible to anyone traveling without cellular data, as if their phone is in airplane mode. Wi-Fi is available in lounges and within the airport hotel. From American chains like Starbucks and Popeyes, to cafes, bakeries and restaurants with a Turkish twist, to a grilled restaurant and a group of casual dining concepts with names of notable chefs attached, Istanbul Airport has options to satisfy all travelers and there are more vacancies to come. Taste of Anatolia is a collection of open-cooked Turkish restaurants where you can find everything from traditional mezze and hot main courses, to roasted kebab doner sandwiches, to all varieties of biscuits, baked goods and sweets, including goeey, cheesy kenefe. The restaurant offers a quieter dining experience and a full bar. Simit Sarayı's outposts serve Turkey's namesake sesame bagels, called simits, with a variety of accompaniments at three locations throughout the airport. At the other end of the terminal, above rooms A and B, Gourmet Trilogy features three fast-chef-driven gastronomic concepts, including Vivanda Burger de Akrame Benallal, whose restaurant of the same name in Paris has two Michelin stars, and outposts of Pizzeria and healthy eats Gram coffee from Istanbul chef and cookbook author Didem Senol. Courtesy of Istanbul Airport Istanbul Airport is really a shopping paradise. Highlights include: The world's largest duty-free zone, Unifree Duty Free, which is divided into nine conceptual areas covering nearly 600,000 square feet. You'll find everything from fashion brands and accessories to beauty, home and electronics offerings. Samsonite, Tumi, Longchamp and Herschel Supply are some of the brands that store travel equipment and accessories. Luxury abounds. Anchored by a Louis Vuitton showcase with an eye-catching digital art facade, Istanbul Airport's shopping promenade features high-fashion deals to rival some of the world's most exclusive shopping streets, with shops in Prada, Dior, Celine, Gucci, Saint Laurent, Fendi and Hermes, to name a few. Another prominent flagship is an outpost of the Turkish design concept store Vakko, which has sections dedicated to household items, business attire, cruise clothes, accessories, gifts, scarves and even a confectionery that sells its author chocolate delights. Established Turkish manufacturers are also represented. Keep an eye on Desa's leather clothing and items, Mehry Mu handbags, Saat & Saat and Gilan baubles watches and accessories, among others. For food, crafts and other Turkish delicacies — yes, including sweets of the same name — head to the Old Bazaar, which focuses on consumables and other locally made items. (If the name sounds familiar, there was a similar offer at the previous airport.) From Turkish coffee and loose-leaf tea to pottery and jewelry, the Old Bazaar is a reliable bet to pick up some souvenirs or last-minute flavors from Turkey to take home. Courtesy of Istanbul Airport As the global center of Turkish Airlines, Istanbul Airport has some pretty fantastic lounge options that make smart use of space over shopping and dining offerings in the heart of the new terminal. The Turkish Airlines Miles&Smiles Lounge and Turkish Airlines Business Class Lounge are outdoor spaces, meandering about 60,000 square feet each that together can accommodate up to 1,530 passengers, the main difference between the two is the clientele they serve. The Miles&Smiles lounge is accessible to all Turkish Airlines and Star Alliance Business Class passengers as well as Economy passengers with a certain frequent flyer status, while the Business Class lounge is exclusively for Turkish Airlines and Star Alliance Business Class passengers traveling internationally. Both lounges have live cooking stations, snack stations, snack bars, cold, self-service bar and drinks areas, as well as traditional self-service Turkish coffee and tea and lots of sweets such as cakes, biscuits and as varied baklava. Additional amenities include luggage storage, suites with shower, designated TV and relaxation areas, meeting rooms and spacious and varied for dinner, work and just rest, depending on what you're looking for to achieve with your time. For young people (and young people at heart) both lounges have a designated playground, a motorized race track, a play area, golf simulators, even an old-fashioned popcorn machine. The Business Class Lounge also has a gallery space that is curated by Istanbul's Modern Museum of Art.Turkish Airlines National Lounge is accessible to all Turkish Airlines Business Class passengers, as well as Economy passengers with certain thousands&smiles or Frequent Flyer Star Alliance and has many of the same amenities as international lounges, on a smaller scale. Please note that the lounge is accessible from a special entrance on the sidewalk; check-in is handled once you have arrived inside. The iGA Lounge serves all non-Business Class Star Alliance passengers. One-day access can also be purchased online or at the entrance as long as space is available, which is hard to understand that it wouldn't be like the living room spans nearly 50,000 square feet. In addition to spacious living areas, there is a main dining area, a bar area and several conference rooms. Priority Pass is currently not accepted. Other lounge offers, such as an exclusive Turkish Airlines lounge, Turkish Airlines arrivals hall and SkyTeam lounge, are yet to come. Do you have any more questions? Istanbul Airport's main information desk is conveniently located immediately after the security check for international passengers. Also look for staff in purple shirts that say Ask Me / Bana Sorun. While Uber is available in Istanbul, the BiTaksi app is an equally popular option and worth downloading, to help with transportation around the city and airport from the city center. Curious about spending a few days in Istanbul on your way to one more destination? Turkish Airlines offers a free stopover program with free accommodation. If you are spending any time on the ground in Istanbul or Turkey, do not forget to apply for a Turkish electronic visa before your departure. Thank you for let us know! Know!
